Commercial and Complex Litigation

A native North Carolinian, Lisa's primary focus is representing NC healers: hospital systems and the physicians, nurses, therapists, and other professionals who work there. She has handled more than 500 medical malpractice cases and claims. She handles claims from the date of the incident through every subsequent stage, including internal and regulator investigations, pre-suit negotiations, discovery involving hundreds of thousands of documents and electronic files, complex motions practice and hearings, and trials and appeals. Lisa regularly assists physicians with Medical Board investigations. She counsels clients on operational health care issues, including risk management practices and policies, and she provides engaging and entertaining compliance training for clinicians. Lisa also has a longstanding antitrust counseling and litigation practice. She has handled multiple jury trials and appeals on claims ranging from negligence, malpractice, and wrongful death to breach of contract, product liability, antitrust and unfair and deceptive trade practices, and punitive damages.
